"Homes of a Hundred Ideas."

Have You Ever Thought What Homes Are For?

"Why, we have always lived in a house and we have been comfortable," states one of our friends who rather resents it because we said she had not enjoyed a home.

The love of a true home is part of one's character, and a barren house cannot satisfy or develop it. Neither will such a house be engaged in one's memory of a home—that hallowed place where every feature reflects the spirit of sympathy, comfort, and protection. A home is a child's right of inheritance. What are homes for anyway? For the benefit of the child—to give it the best that man can incorporate in the structure—that women can render ideal as a home.

Can there be any greater motive than to produce homes for such a purpose? Does not every woman who sent us ideas for our new homes, know why homes should be places of realized ideas? Every woman's heart of them does.

We have striven to so render these homes. We leave it to you to judge. We have proved our point—and the homes are ideal.

The purchase plan is generous to the man. Why should he not do his part?

The convincing evidence of our rapid sales in the past is the most forceful commendation we could desire as to the liberal values we offer in this property. Any man or woman who has the ambition to own a home must reach the conclusion that this opportunity is greater than any ever before offered.

SHANNON & LUCAS (SELLING AGENTS), 113 FOURTEENTH STREET, WILL ANNOUNCE THE LOCATION OF OUR "HOMES OF A HUNDRED IDEAS" IN SATURDAY'S HERALD. IT GIVES US PLEASURE TO PLACE THESE HOMES BEFORE YOU, AND WE AWAIT YOUR OPINION.

Middaugh and Shannon, Inc.,

COLORADO BUILDING.

"No place like home; no homes like ours."

The Washington Herald has selected for their contest one of our "Homes of a Hundred Ideas." They state that the reason this selection was made was because of location and of Middaugh & Shannon's (Inc.) known reputation for good architecture, construction, and value, and because they are incorporating in their homes the ideas of the women of Washington.

INDIAN MAY REVOLT

Gov. Marshall Has Hopes of Democratic Legislature.

HE SCOUTS TARIFF COMMISSION

Beveridge Plan Would Not Accomplish Much, Declares Hoosier State Executive, Who Is in Washington to Attend Gridiron Club Dinner. Country Growing Socialistic.

"If things do not change we will have a Democratic legislature in Indiana next time."

This optimistic statement was made by Gov. Thomas R. Marshall, the new Democratic governor of the Hoosier State, last night, when asked how he was getting along with his Republican lawmakers.

Gov. and Mrs. Marshall arrived in Washington yesterday from New York, and the governor will be a guest at the Gridiron dinner to-morrow night. They are staying at the Riggs House.

Speaking of politics in general, Gov. Marshall said he was sorry to note the country is becoming more and more socialistic in its ideas. He attributes this to the high protective tariff system, and says it is forcing the laboring classes to speak against the oppression and makes them realize more and more the necessity and benefit of "tariff for revenue only."

Scouts Tariff Commission Plan.

Although he has not had time to study the question fully, the governor says he does not believe the tariff commission provided by the bill introduced in Congress yesterday is practicable. He thinks that if men not interested in manufactures are put on the commission it will result in the death of the protective system, and he added significantly, that the Republican party was not going to stand for anything like that. He said a tariff commission composed of one man elected from each state might be a better solution of the question, but he doubts that.

He asserts the country will continue in turmoil, so far as business is concerned, until the tariff question is taken out of politics. To do this, he says, the country must listen to the Democratic idea of "tariff for revenue;" that it will be impossible to keep the business interests from interfering with legislation as long as they are crying for protection.

"But I came to Washington to attend the Gridiron dinner, and not to discuss politics," said the governor. "I have always heard so much about the Gridiron Club that it didn't take me but a minute to decide to accept this invitation, and now I am going to have one of the times of my life."

presented to Mrs. Scott. Pupils of the Chevy Chase Seminary gave a select musical programme for the visitors.

All the "daughters" in Washington will journey to Rockville this afternoon and participate in the ceremonies incident to the organization of the Janet Montgomery chapter. The surroundings will be appropriately fit, inasmuch as the exercises will be held in the old Hungerford Inn.

It was in this house that the first resolution against Great Britain, which brought on the "Boston Tea Party," was signed. In 1776 Washington, Braddock, and Lafayette were entertained in the same inn, and the furnishings that were used by the three generals are still intact.

Accompanied by Mrs. Amos G. Draper, Mrs. John A. Murphy, and Mrs. Scott, Mrs. McLean will leave for the Maryland town at 2:30 o'clock.

Coincidentally with the D. A. R. Congress, the annual convention of the National Society of Children of the American Revolution will be held in this city. The sessions will open on Sunday afternoon at St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets, when Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton will deliver the address.

The crowning event of the week for the children will be a reception by the President and Mrs. Taft Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

Office of Historian General.

In the midst of the excitement of the contest for president general other D. A. R. matters are being overlooked. The historian general, Mrs. Eakin Gadsby, is eligible for two more years. At the District State conference her eligibility was not spoken of, but the information was given to the press that she was seriously ill and her name could not be used for re-election. The one grain of truth in this statement was the illness of Mrs. Gadsby, but she had authorized no statement before or during her illness. Two months ago Mrs. Darwin and Mrs. Briggs were approached by the two factions to run for historian. Mrs. Darwin at first declined to run against the present officer, whose rights she justly and courteously considered, but when the above information was circulated she consented to run. Mrs. Briggs, the daughter of Senator Frye, of Maine, was not aware of the constitutional rights of Mrs. Gadsby for election to the office for the next two years, subject to the vote of the conference, but learning later of the true state of affairs she offered to withdraw her name in favor of the present historian general.

Part by the Shermons.

New York, April 15.—At the reception given to Mrs. William Cummings Story this afternoon at the Hotel Gotham by the Manhattan Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution Mrs. John Francis Yawger explained how "the administration faction had spread another false report."

"The report," she said, "that the reception which Mr. and Mrs. Sherman are to give at the New Willard on Saturday is a nonpartisan one, and that all daughters will be welcome. I suppose all daughters will be welcome to the reception, but the fact remains that the reception is to be given in honor of Mrs. Story, and I can prove it."

She drew forth triumphantly a much-encrusted card and pointed to the first two lines. Not even Mrs. McLean herself had seen this card could fall to have been that they read:

"The President and Mrs. Sherman invite you to meet Mrs. William Cummings Story."

"There," said Mrs. Yawger, "what do you think of that?"

ORCHESTRA IS REORGANIZED.

Henry C. Rakemann Elected Leader.

Adopt Co-operative Plan.

That this city will support an up-to-date symphony orchestra like those which annually visit Washington from Philadelphia and Boston, was the contention of more than fifty members of the Washington Symphony Orchestra, who gathered last night in the Lee Building for reorganization.

Henry C. Rakemann was elected leader. It was decided to conduct the business of the organization on a co-operative basis. The proceeds of all future work will be divided equally between the members.

Prof. Rakemann is well known in musical circles. He is a graduate of the Juilliard School, of Germany. For several years he has conducted the orchestra at the Belasco Theater.

MRS. E. R. WARREN DEAD.

Former Washington Woman Stricken Suddenly in London.

Mrs. Elizabeth R. Warren, formerly of Washington, and for years a resident of Albemarle County, Va., widow of the late B. H. Warren, formerly an officer in the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, and later vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburgh, and president of the Allis Chalmers Company, of Milwaukee, died suddenly in London yesterday.

Mrs. Warren's two daughters, who were with her in Europe, sail for New York to-morrow, on the St. Louis, accompanying their mother's body to Quincy, Mass., where funeral services will be held on a date to be announced next week.

Dickinson Names His Party.

Secretary of War Dickinson yesterday announced the personnel of the party to accompany him on his trip to Panama on the Mayflower. Those who will go will be the Secretary and Mrs. Dickinson, Miss Edna Crowley, of Chicago; Prof. and Mrs. James Ross, of Louisville; Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Ewing, of Nashville, and Lincoln R. Clark, secretary of the Secretary. Postmaster General Hitchcock has been invited and may go. The Mayflower will stop at Havana for a day.

AMERICAN NATIONALS AT FESTAL BOARD

fairly busy," he said, explaining why he and his associates had not had more time to give directly to the work of the international bureau.

"There's not much in names. A republic, a monarchy, an oligarchy, as it may happen to be called from time to time, is useful to give to the people security of life, liberty and property. We are competent now in this country to govern ourselves. I am an optimist. I believe in the competency of the men I see here to-night, in the competency of the Caucasian race, for self government."

Mr. Cannon spoke of the growth that will take place in the population of the United States, and of the nations of Central and South America, and of the common interest which geography and association have given them. The Panama Canal he referred to as the fruit of "a wise policy on the part of our respective governments," and closed by saying:

"It is for us to bring law and order to each of the countries of all America, and with law and order, and friendship we shall work out our salvations."

Address by Senator Root.

A forceful and scholarly address on "The progress of Pan-Americanism" was made by Senator Root, who introduced Mr. Barrett as "the man to whose efforts is due the foundation of the bureau." Mr. Root was received with a storm of applause as he rose to speak.

In all this enormous, fact-finding work there is no better evidence of the underlying goodness of mankind than the fact that everywhere and always, as men come to know each other better, attention is less and less attracted to the qualities that cause prejudice and dislike, and more and more concentrated upon the qualities that attract friendship and affection. The great office of the international union of American republics, which the Bureau of American Republics is the office and business organization, I understand to be to bring into prominence among the American peoples the good qualities that underlie all differences of nation, of religion, of race, of law, of custom, and of manner; to bring into prominence the knowledge under which the prejudices that come from differences disappear and the friendship that comes from an recognition of common aims of common sympathies and common ideals takes the place of the old animosities.

I wish to say and can say it as an observer—that the director of this institution, who is our host to-night, comes straight into his position because he came to it not seeking a place or a salary or personal advancement, but because he had in his heart the spirit of Americanism (applause), because he had the sympathetic appreciation of those good qualities which exist in all the peoples of America, and which it is for the best interest of all the peoples of America to have known and recognized (a voice, "Good!") (applause), and his enthusiasm, his energy, his courage, and his wisdom for the cause in which he has enlisted is an invaluable asset for the peace, the progress, and the happiness of all the peoples of the western hemisphere (applause and cheers).

Rational and Permanent.

Among the many advantages which result from a change in the Secretary of State of the United States, one which is quite clear is this: That it permits all of us to see that the recent renaissance of kindly international feeling among the American republics is not personal and temporary, but is rational and permanent. (Applause and cheers.) It is a long time measured in events, between the congress of Panama in 1889 and the congress of Buenos Aires in 1896; it is a long time since the statesmanship of Mr. Olney and the eloquence of Mr. Hay called the generous sympathy of the peoples of the United States to the cause of South American independence (applause); it is a long time measured in events, since the time when the far-sighted statesman of Blaine's sympathy nature saw that the future of America lay in the place of union, sympathy and in effort among all the American republics. (Applause.) But during this time in the progress of those years have been opened the possibility of fruition to the dream of liberty and of union that seemed for the time to be but dreams.

Of gatherings of fraternal associations, the kind of words we speak, the declarations of sympathy and common interests which we make are not the representations of an idle dream. They are not empty sentiments. You cannot put your finger upon a specific advantage coming from them; you cannot say that because of the Bureau of American Republics and its work, and that because of the speeches of Mr. Hay, that because of the efforts of Richard and Hay in the diplomacy of Europe, you or I are richer or better than we have been, but nevertheless, it is all a part of the great development of our race, moving with majestic momentum along the lines of civilization, with all the specific interests, the personal selfishness, the quarrels and controversies and jealousies and animosities of the hour but trifles upon the surface; the majestic progress of the development of a great race, working and upon the basis of individual existence but with that slow and sure progress that finds its basis in general position, in general friendship and peace, in general justice and liberty; that progress which contributes all human effort that is in the line of the laws of nature, and to that we contribute to-night.

Friendly Recognition.

To that every word of friendly recognition, of kindly intention, every act that brings better acquaintance and more sympathetic appreciation to the peoples of America contributes. We can and go—Presidents and Vice Presidents, and Speakers, and secretaries, and ambassadors, and ministers—but our countries more on toward their destiny, and thank God, by the slow development of good ideas, more together, helpful to each other toward the same goal, toward the same ideal, working out, each for itself, but all together, ideas of justice, and liberty, and peace. It depends not upon any one of us nor upon all of us. No man and no combination of men, no government can arrest the great development. We can accelerate it and hasten it; we cannot prevent it. (Applause.)

Are All Americans.

We are citizens of the United States, of North America, of the United Mexican States, of Brazil, and Peru and Argentina and Chile and Central America, but we are all Americans (applause); and more and more among our children and our children's children, before all the world, before Europe, which formerly held us in little account, before Asia, which formerly held Europe in little account, before all the world, we will grow ever more proud of the heritage of liberty and popular government, born and nurtured and developed to its highest quality and radiance in these favored republics of all Americas. (Applause.)

Others who spoke were the ministers of Costa Rica and Argentina, the latter of whom talked Spanish. The closing address was made by Representative Champ Clark.

Russian Minister Resigns.

St. Petersburg, April 15.—The czar has accepted the resignation of Foreign Minister Isvolsky, and appointed ex-Premier Goremykin as his successor. The appointment of the latter, who is undergoing the cure at Weisbaden, has not yet been gazetted.

ARRIVES IN A RUSH.

Col. Goethals' Secretary Makes Hurdled Trip to Capital.

James G. Darden, private secretary to Col. Goethals, engineer in chief of the Panama Canal, arrived in Washington, about 10 o'clock last evening and registered at the Shoreham.

Mr. Darden arrived in New York yesterday by the steamship Advance from Cristobal, evidently on a hurry call from Washington. A tug took him from the liner and landed him at the Pennsylvania railroad pier in Jersey City, from which he hurried to the Capital.

When interviewed, he refused to say anything about his mission or why he had come to Washington in such a rush.

Are You— Of Course You Are.

Are you an optimist? Are you a baseball fan? Are you interested in politics? Do you read fiction? Are you interested in the tariff? Have you bought or sold wheat in the Chicago market? In fact—but why enumerate? All these topics and phases of life are treated in an adequate manner in The Washington Herald for next Sunday.

If you haven't found in this list something which appeals to you, buy a copy of the paper, and the chances are what would be termed a "long shot" that you will find it in some other department.

Hundreds of unbiased readers have expressed their highest approval of the class and character of the reading matter, whether news or features, in the Sunday edition of The Washington Herald.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau.

Washington, Thursday, April 15, 1909.—4 p. m.

Showers covered Tuesday in New England, the Middle and Upper Mississippi valleys, and the North Pacific States; elsewhere the weather was fair. Temperatures rose generally, except from the Upper Lake region, over the Missouri Valley, where it fell to slightly below the seasonal average. Showers are indicated for Friday from the States of the Missouri Valley over the Western Lake region, and during Saturday the area of precipitation will cover the Middle Western States and extend thence over the Ohio Valley and the Lake region. Temperature changes will not be marked.

The winds along the Atlantic coast will be light and variable; on the Gulf coast light to moderate easterly, on the Lower and Upper Lakes light to moderate and mostly easterly.

Steamers departing Friday for European ports will have light, variable winds, shifting to moderate easterly, and partly cloudy weather to the Grand Banks.
